June 1800
15mm “Snappy Nappy” Scenario

“This battle is completely lost. However, there is time to win another.”

--General Louis Desaix

BACKGROUND

Upon returning from his ill-advised Egyptian adventure, Napoleon Bonaparte became “First Consul” of France. Though widely expected to assume command of the Rhine theater, Napoleon instead assembled a reserve army to cross the Alps and contest Austrian control of northern Italy. By May 1800, Michael von Melas had put Massena under siege in Genoa and threatened to invade southern France.

The June 1800 campaign to follow would see equally matched forces—about 75,000 per side—operating across northwestern Italy. Melas was no fool, and upon learning of Napoleon’s march, he sought to concentrate his forces between the French and the relief of Genoa.

Much to everyone’s surprise—and to the dismay of Massena—Napoleon had no intention of relieving the siege. He instead struck for Milan and aimed to threaten the Austrian line of communication to Mantua and Vienna. Melas suddenly found himself on the back foot and came to hasty terms with Massena in order to achieve some freedom of maneuver...but it was too late. Will the Austrian players in this campaign make the same mistake? And will the French be so bold as to abandon the prize of Genoa? The fate of Italy hangs in the balance!

GAME LENGTH

French victory if they capture Austrian lines of supply at F, G, & H, or if the Austrians capture French lines at C, D, & E. Game also ends if either army has lost 50% of its starting units (26 routed French or Austrian units).

TABLETOPS

The scenario requires five 6’x4’ tabletops. Maps of each table and a GM “master map” showing how they interconnect are available on the next page. There are also a number of “staging areas,” representing locations where troops can pass through or rest without being able to engage in combat.

Towns and fortresses are marked. Rivers are impassible except at marked roads (each corps has one mobile pontoon). Mountains (dark gray) are impassible.

DEPLOYMENT

Massena’s main force begins under siege at the Genoa staging area, with Suchet on Table W. Napoleon, Victor, and Lannes may begin at any mountain pass staging area. No more than two corps per staging area.

Melas begins on Table W, Ott is locked up in the siege at the Genoa staging area, and Kaim must divide his force as evenly as possible between Table X and Table Z.

SCENARIO NOTES

This scenario requires at least 7 players and one GM. The GM hands out the briefings, sets up the tables, and helps players navigate between tabletops using the road network. Roads are like staging areas, each requiring a different length of real time to traverse, and opposing forces are not allowed on the same road at the same time. The player briefings contain more notes about how to play a game on five tabletops at once, but all matters of debate are to be settled by the GM. Turns are not important between the tables and all events are to be governed in “real time.” When a player arrives on a new tabletop, he must wait until the start of the new turn to begin participating in the action. This means that a player who is on a tabletop by himself will be able to cross an empty table, unopposed, quite rapidly.

FRENCH BRIEFING

See attached document for detailed French player briefings. The player commanding Massena's Army of Italy receives a separate briefing.
